

Peter looks forward to addressing the many policy issues that will arise now that ACA is becoming a local association of USAC. Peter wants to find creative ways to maintain the level of service enjoyed under ACA and also capitalize on the advantages of becoming a local association. Peter believes that this is a perfect time to revisit ACA's strategic direction and then develop a more diversified funding plan that will help ACA meet its short and long-term goals as a local association. His experience working with other nonprofit organizations and helping them develop strategic plans and fundraising plans will help bring additional creativity to the ACA Board. He also understands that having a paid Executive Director for a nonprofit organization such as ACA is a great opportunity and he wants to help that person succeed to the fullest extent possible. Finally, he wants to promote how the Board of Directors and Executive Director can best interact with its members (racers, promoters, officials, mechanics, and others) to draw upon their skills and to solicit help to move the ACA forward as a USAC local association.

Peter was born and raised in Littleton, CO and now lives in Denver with his wife Michelle. He works in Denver as an environmental scientist for the Environmental Protection Agency. He began road bike racing during his college years in Ft. Collins under USCF/BRAC and has continued racing in Colorado on-and-off until present. Most recently he has been an active master's road racer, coming up through 35+ and moving into 45+. His has been on several ACA cycling teams for more than a decade and he is entering into his third season with the Mix1 Cycling Team.
