CANCELLATION POLICY

The primary goal of the Bob Cook Memorial Mt. Evans Hill Climb is to operate a safe event for everyone involved. While the event recognizes the aspirations and commitment of its participants, there may be circumstances where it is deemed unsafe to proceed with the race as planned. In addition to participant safety, considerations to alter or cancel the event will be based on other factors, such as potential adverse impact on local residents and the capacity of municipal agencies and healthcare systems.

The Chief Referee and Race Director reserve the right to cancel or alter the race to avoid exposing participants and the community to undue risks that might result from staging the event under potentially hazardous conditions. Circumstances that could prompt the cancellation, alteration or postponement of the event are not always foreseeable, but include inclement weather or the threat of inclement weather (e.g. tornados, lightening, fire, high heat or icy conditions), acts of terrorism or civil unrest or the threat of terrorism or civil unrest, and similar circumstances beyond the control of event officials.

In the case of lightning, severe rain, snow, wind, fire or any other condition that affects the potential safety of the participants, spectators and volunteers, the event may be delayed and all participants will be asked to proceed to safety.

The event will start if the weather clears (in the case of severe weather). In the case of light rain, the event will continue until or unless safety becomes an issue.

To the extent possible, notifications about weather conditions, event postponement, course adjustments and event cancellation will be communicated via the following channels: the official website (www.bicyclerace.com), e-mail notifications, Facebook, Twitter, on-course signage and flags, and public address announcements.

Event conditions resulting in race cancellation, course alteration or participant withdrawal will not warrant the refunding of race entry fees or granting of future race credits.

Regardless of event day conditions, all participants should be discerning of their own fitness level. It is understood that each participant assumes personal responsibility upon entering the event and understands the inherent risk that bicycle racing presents.
